Investment case

Emerging Asia is an exciting growth story: the region's economic development has outpaced that of developed markets and other regions of the emerging world for several years. The region continues to grow, but its drivers are changing as many countries find themselves in a new phase of their development, with major sources of future expansion yet to be tapped. These include increased infrastructure spending, rising domestic consumption, greater penetration of financial services and the opening-up of the region's internal market thanks to better trading links.

Fund concept

A high-conviction, bottom-up investment strategy focusing on the best stocks in Asia. We build a concentrated portfolio of 35–50 stocks looking for what we call 'underappreciated expectations'. We embed conviction investing in a robust risk management framework to avoid concentration risk.
