Market Comment

- The fourth quarter of 2022 saw a relief rally in risk assets across the board, capping a very difficult year for equity and bond markets. This rebound did come with some volatility however as markets corrected in December after a strong positive move in October and November. Expectations of a more dovish fed, with even some participants anticipating rate cuts as soon as 2023 were the main catalysts. In terms of regions, Europe and Emerging markets outperformed the US, with the UK even ending the year in positive territory, driven by the weakness of the British Pound. China ended a very volatile year with a strong rally as the government's looked to move beyond its zero Covid policy. In Fixed Income, EM debt and Investment grade outperformed High Yield. Government bonds were positive overall but Europe and Japan saw negative returns.
- Despite some relief in Q4, 2022 will be remembered as the year when both equity and fixed income markets were repriced due to higher inflation and interest rates. A recession is now widely expected in 2023 and markets are anticipating a decline in inflation and possibly in interest rates, which could be supportive. Commodity prices stabilised on aggregate in Q4, which helped taming inflationary pressures. Markets could remain macro driven in the near future, focusing on the Fed and economic data, but once the extent of the potential recession becomes clearer, fundamentals could reclaim centre stage and dispersion could return.
- The current market environment provides a very interesting set of opportunities for our U Access (IRL) Campbell Absolute Return UCITS fund, which offers access to diversifying and decorrelated alpha models, trading mainly in equity indices, forex, credit and cash equities. It has limited exposure to fixed income and none to commodities. It has historically shown a limited correlation to traditional assets.

Performance Review

- For the fourth quarter of 2022, U Access (IRL) Campbell Absolute Return UCITS returned -3.93% (Class B USD, net of fees), ending 2022 with YTD gains of +22.23%. In terms of contribution by strategy, quarterly losses came from momentum, market-neutral quantitative equities, short-term, and quant macro strategies.
- Momentum strategies experienced losses in foreign exchange, equity indices, and credit and gained in fixed income. From a strategy perspective, losses came from single-market and thematic strategies while adaptive strategies gained.
- Quant macro experienced losses in enhanced carry while macro dynamics strategies gained. Losses for the strategy group came from equity indices and foreign exchange with gains in fixed income and credit.
- Short-term strategies experienced losses in regime capture/nonlinear alpha and momentum strategies. Market losses came from fixed income and foreign exchange with gains in equity indices.

- Market-neutral quantitative equities experienced losses in statistical arbitrage and momentum strategies and gains in fundamental.
- By sector, the portfolio was down in foreign exchange, cash equities, and equity indices and up in fixed income and credit.
- Top-performing markets in the portfolio were Euro, Hungarian forint, and Polish zloty forwards. Bottom-performing markets were Norwegian krone and Australian dollar forwards.

Portfolio Activity

- The portfolio maintained a steady risk posture throughout the quarter. Realised sector risk was led by foreign exchange and fixed income. Net notional exposure was low as the portfolio maintained diversified positioning within and among sectors. Net exposure remained close to zero in market-neutral equities.
- From a positioning standpoint, the portfolio was long US dollar until the second half of December and turned short, short fixed income futures, and switched from short in equity indices to net long and back to short at the end of the quarter. The portfolio had a generally flat position in CDS indices throughout the quarter.

Outlook

- Market optimism about a Fed pivot has migrated to a Fed pause, with investors encouraged by a “goldilocks” scenario of December US CPI declining 0.1 percent and US unemployment claims hovering around 205k. Equity markets are seeing investors average in new money with the consensus range in the S&P500 between 3,600 and 4,200 for 2023, while fixed income investors lock in risk-free yields near the highest level in two decades. However, large investment firms continue to warn that investors are underestimating inflation in the market and the probability of a recession.
- Macro dispersion is likely to continue in 2023 based on the probability of recession and/or a hard landing, greater investment in commodities and commodity producing economies, and the repricing of global assets in a higher-for-longer interest rate environment.
