Investment case: Japan's corporate governance revolution and opportunities

- The adoption of the Stewardship Code (2014) and the Corporate Governance Code (2015) provides a fertile ground for long and short investment opportunities for the years to come.
- The move towards global standards could boost leading companies' returns, offering a clear potential to make money out of long opportunities. Japan's corporate governance reflects positively in the figures today, as shown below.

- Although there has been steady improvement in governance at Japanese companies since the adoption of these codes, such improvements have not happened uniformly across companies. This has resulted in large differences between governance structures, creating the opportunity for shorting many laggard companies as well.
- Equally importantly, our detailed research on corporate governance reforms in Japan shows that the return differences between "good" and "bad" governance companies are large and persistent, which evidences the long-lasting excess return potential of this investment opportunity.
- U Access - Long/Short Japan Corporate Governance gives access to Japan's corporate governance thematic through a highly liquid market- and sector-neutral long/short portfolio.
- Last, our unique solution addresses the difficulties that many global investors have encountered with investing in Japan (e.g. classic value trap, adverse JPY movements, significant sector rotations).

Fund concept

- Market- & sector-neutral strategy
- ESG thematic play addressing Japan's ongoing and long-lasting corporate governance revolution
- Conviction portfolio of ca. 30 longs (relatively undervalued stocks with good governance) and 60 shorts (richly valued stocks with weak governance), with financial metrics also considered and a strong buy & sell discipline
- Highly liquid portfolio (TOPIX 500 universe)
- Unique approach based on extensive research developed by Portfolio Manager Zuhair Khan (ex-Head of Research and Japan Strategist at Jefferies who was voted 3rd-best Japan strategist in the 2017 AsiaMoney poll)
- ESG and tangible impact investing solution with insights into corporate governance at the core of the strategy, unlike other hedge funds that use these criteria as an overlay
