GLOSSARY

Benchmark

Index used as basis for measuring the performance of an investment fund. Also called reference index or comparison index.

Derivatives

Derivatives are financial instruments whose prices depend on the price movements in a reference variable, known as the underlying. Underlying assets may be shares, equity indices, government bonds, currencies, interest rates, commodities like wheat and gold, or also swaps. Derivative financial instruments may be unconditional forward transactions or they may be options. They are traded either on futures and options exchanges on standardised terms, or over-the-counter (OTC) on freely negotiated terms. Changes in the price of the underlying lead in certain situations to considerably higher price fluctuations in the derivative. Derivatives can be used to hedge against financial risks, to speculate on price changes (trading) or to take advantage of price differences between markets (arbitrage).

Volatility

Volatility is a statistical measure of the dispersion of returns for a given security or market index. In most cases the higher the volatility the riskier the security. Computed over the last 10 years or since inception.

Tracking error

The tracking error measures how close security or portfolio returns are to benchmark returns over time. The TE can be viewed as an indicator of how actively a fund is managed and its corresponding risk level. Computed over the last 10 years or since inception.
