Market Comment

- After two consecutive months of relief rallies, global equity markets gave back some gains and ended December in the red. The last quarter of the year was nevertheless positive for major equity markets. The MSCI AC World ended Q4 up +9.8%, with +9.7% gains for Emerging Market equities, +9.6% for European Equities, +7.6% performance for US equities, +4.3% for Swiss equities and +3.3% for Japanese equities. This brought the full yearly loss for global equities down to -18.4%, the biggest annual loss since 2008.
- US inflation moderated again in November with +0.1% m/m increase versus +0.3% expected and +0.4% increase in the prior month. The yearly headline trend also declined from +7.7% y/y to +7.1%, while core inflation eased more moderately from +6.3% to +6.0%. The Fed remained attentive to inflationary risks and raised rates by 50bps in December. Business confidence declined in December with the US ISM Manufacturing coming in below 50 at 48.4. US GDP figures were nevertheless revised up for Q3 from +2.9% q/q SAAR to +3.2%, supported by firmer private and public consumption. Eurozone Q3 GDP figure also came in better than expected at +2.3% q/q, reflecting resilient post-pandemic household consumption and tourism. The ECB increased key rates by 50bps in December, with a hawkish tone on inflation trends. The SNB also increased its key rates by 50bps, citing inflationary pressures from abroad and price increases spreading across various categories of goods and services that continued to put upward pressure on inflation.
- Global equities traded near the long-term average forward PE ratio at 15.0 at the end of December, with 2022 earnings growth expectations steady at +10.1%, up from +7% at the start of the year, while 2023 expectations were further reduced to +2.8%, down from +9% at the start of the year. In fact, significant margin pressure is expected for companies which do not have enough pricing power to offset the likely weakening consumer demand in 2023.
- All sectors of the MSCI AC World ended Q4 in positive territory except for Consumer Discretionary. The Fintech thematic (Global Fintech ETF) lost -5.1% over the quarter, massively underperforming the larger global equities universe. Names like Coinbase, Paypal and Bill.com were among the largest performance detractors over the quarter while Block, Fiserv and Adyen were among the largest performance contributors.

Performance Review

- UBAM – Global Fintech Equity delivered +8.4% versus +9.8% for the MSCI AC World over Q4 2022, and compared to -5.1% for the Fintech thematic (Global Fintech ETF).
- The main contributors to relative performance versus the benchmark over the period were the overweight in Fair Isaac, the position in Swissquote, and the overweight in Mastercard (+165bps, +123bps and +86bps respectively). Fair Isaac rose more than +45% over the period after reporting solid Q4 results and issuing 2023 guidance materially ahead of expectations on sales and earnings. Swissquote recovered +36.4% over the quarter as the company confirmed its 2022 guidance despite the challenging market environment. Mastercard was up +22.4% despite soft Q4 revenue guidance, but Q3 revenue and earnings came in ahead of estimates, with cross-border driving top-line growth amid strong travel demand. The company also announced several deals with new partners in different verticals that should lead to additional revenue streams supporting high-teens topline growth for the next couple of years.
- The main performance detractors over the quarter were the overweights in Fidelity National, Jack Henry & Associates and Transunion (-55bps, -52bps and -48bps respectively). Fidelity National dropped -9.8% after disappointing Q3 results and a big cut to its 2022 guidance driven by the cost of its Worldpay acquisition. The company also launched a new operational cost cutting plan and a strategic review of underperforming or non-core businesses. Jack Henry & Associates lost -3.5% after missing quarterly estimates and cutting FY EPS forecasts. Transunion was down -4.5% despite reporting good Q3 results that beat estimates. The company however guided for 2023 growth to come in below their long-term growth target due to the slowing macro environment.

Portfolio Activity and ESG

- Over Q4, the team did not exit nor initiate new positions in the portfolio. However, the positions in Fair Isaac, Nexi and Leonteq were reduced. Fair Isaac had to be reduced upon the 30% surge in its share price the day after the company increased 2023 guidance to comply with UCITS restrictions. In the case of Nexi the reduction was due to continued concerns of a weaker consumer base into the end of the year in most of its key markets, whereas the Leonteq was reduced after news that the company was involved in an alleged money laundering case.
- ESG considerations are fully integrated in each step of the fundamental investment process with a focus on a lower carbon risk objective. At the end of December 2022, the portfolio had a AAA ESG rating with an ESG quality score of 9.3, versus a AA rating and 8.1 score for the MSCI AC World (ratings based on MSCI ESG Research). The portfolio also had a lower weighted average carbon intensity than the wider global equities universe with 6.2 T CO₂e/$m sales vs 161.0 for the MSCI AC World index.

Outlook

- After turbulent markets in 2022 driven by inflation pressures and valuation compression, 2023's expectations are starting to reflect downward earnings revisions that could lead to an extended period of volatility into the new year. An active investment approach should protect investors from the lower quality part of the market with more downside risk for earnings as well as from the pressures that some Fintech companies are facing on the back of a weaker consumer outlook. The Global Fintech portfolio should be well positioned to weather the downside risk on earnings, while remaining exposed to structural growth trends in the Fintech space.
